

cars.com is hiding $463,428 of price across every new car we list

Volkswagen North Scottsdale · cars.com dealer 109556 · All prices read live on 27 July 2026

● VERDICT: CONFIRMED — 136 of 136 units affected

Independently replicated. Two sessions ran this audit in parallel, sharing no intermediate data and using different collection paths. Both produced identical figures — 136 units, $463,428, the $368,500/$94,928 split, and the same identity on 136 of 136 units.

Our cars.com feed publishes the pre-bonus advertised price with the dealer fee baked in, and never applies the customer bonus. This is not a sampling inference: it is an exact arithmetic identity that holds on every single unit in the store.

cars.com price = MSRP – Discount + $698 Dealer Fees

True for 136 of 136 new units — zero exceptions. The customer bonus appears on our own price stack for 128 of them and is never reflected on cars.com.

What a shopper actually sees. Atlas SEL, VIN 1V2BN2CA6TC539279, stock W19342. cars.com shows $50,224. The same car on our own site shows $46,724 after its $3,500 Retail Customer Bonus. A cars.com shopper never sees a number below $50,224 — the car is sorted, filtered and price-compared against rivals at a figure $4,198 above its true comparable price.

Rank impact the three highest-volume flagged models

Comparable trims are matched by VIN configuration prefix, not by dealer trim label — labels are inconsistent across stores, with several rivals listing 4MOTION units as “SE R-Line Black” with no drivetrain qualifier. Larry H. Miller's listed price includes a $549 documentary fee (verified verbatim on their own site); that $549 is unwound below to match cars.com convention. Chapman Volkswagen lists zero new vehicles on cars.com — 14 listings, all pre-owned — so they are absent from these rankings, a notable competitive fact in itself.

Tiguan 2.0T SE R-Line Black (FWD)

#3 → #1 of 4

VIN config 3VVHR... · 21 of our units

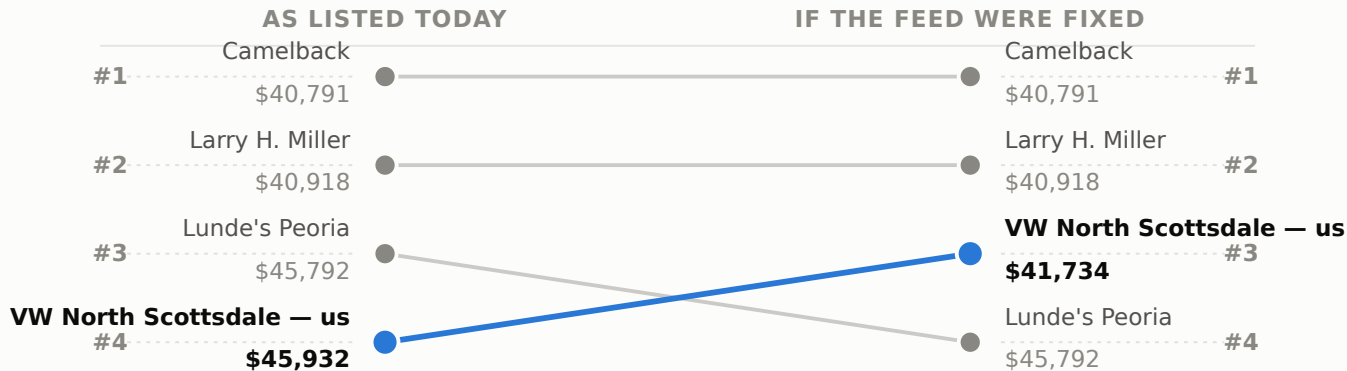

Fixing the feed makes us outright cheapest on our single highest-volume trim.

Sensitivity. If Larry Miller's unverified $1,082 accessories addendum is also unwound ($33,627), we would land 2nd rather than 1st — still a two-place gain.

Atlas 2.0T SE w/Technology (FWD)

#4 → #3 of 4

VIN config 1V2JN... · 13 of our units

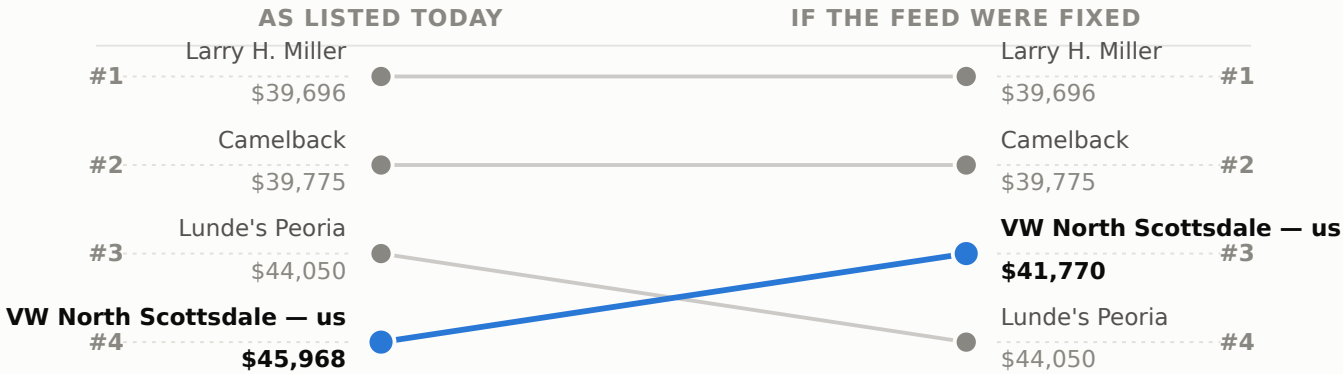

We currently list as the most expensive Atlas SE w/Tech in the market, $4,141 above Camelback. Fixing the feed closes that to $943.

Atlas Cross Sport 2.0T SE w/Technology (FWD)

#4 → #3 of 4

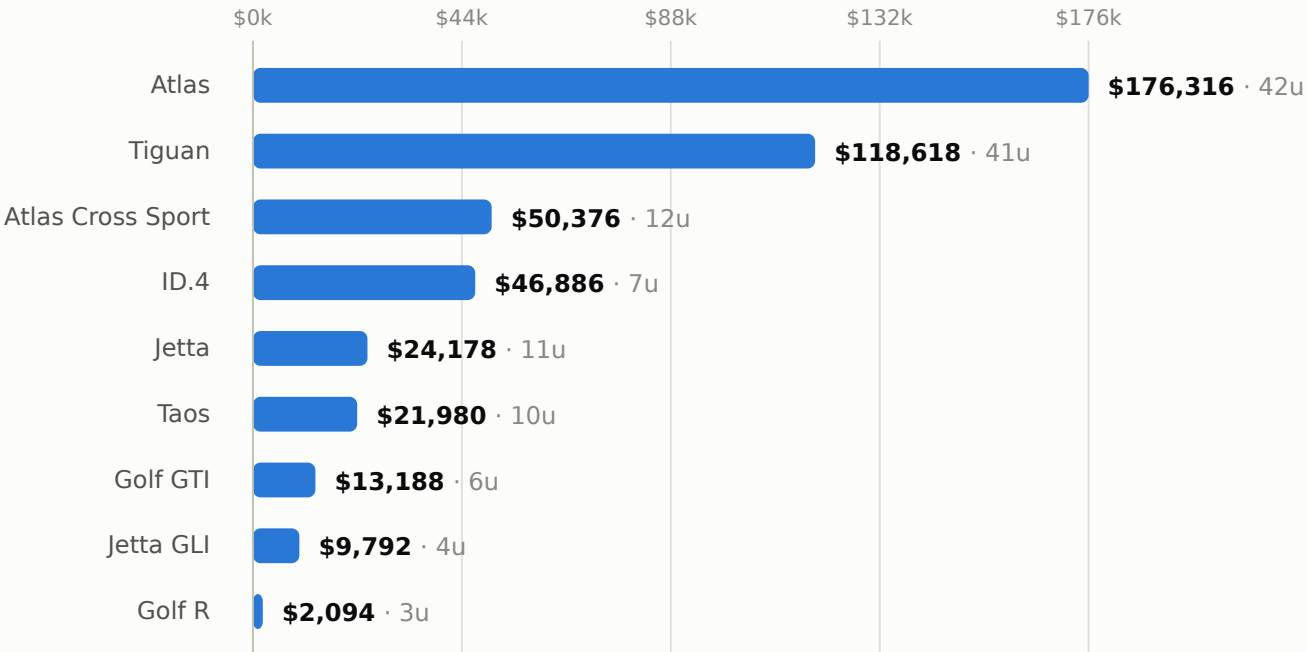

VIN config 1V2WC... · 2 of our units

Thin comparable set — only 2 of our 12 flagged Cross Sports are FWD SE w/Tech. The weakest of the three stories; do not lead with it.

The pattern. On every one of the three models the feed costs us at least one rank position, and on the two we stock most deeply it drops us to the bottom or near-bottom of a four-dealer market we would otherwise lead or sit mid-pack in. The prices are already competitive — only the number we publish is not.

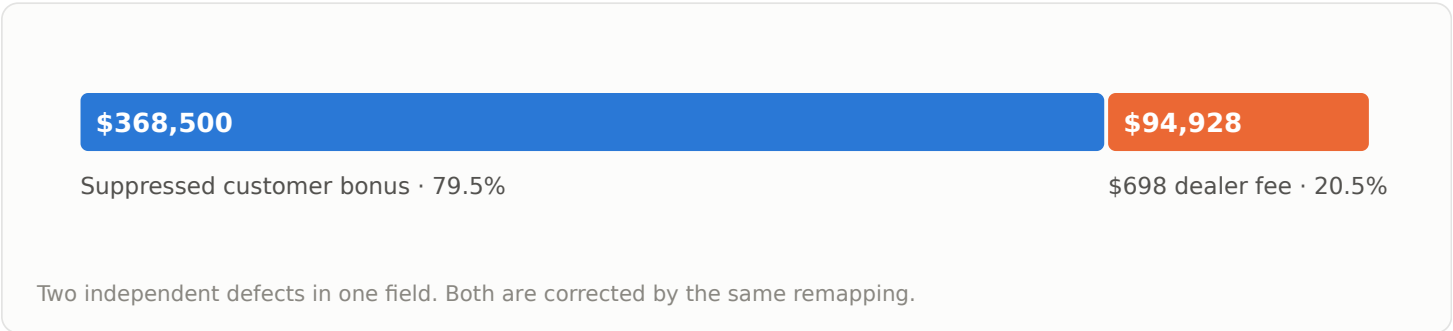

Where the money is hidden dollars by model

Total gap between the cars.com price and our comparable lowest price, summed across each model's flagged units. Hover a bar for its unit count.

Priority follows the dollars: Atlas (42 units, $176,316) and Tiguan (41 units, $118,618) together account for 64% of the total. ID.4 is the highest-value fix per unit — only 7 cars, but $6,698 of suppressed price on each.

What the gap is made of Roughly four-fifths of the gap is the suppressed customer bonus. The remaining fifth is the $698 dealer fee being carried inside the price field — which is why even the 8 units with no bonus at all still list $698 above their comparable price.

Two of these independently reproduce figures captured days earlier by a different method in an earlier pass ($24,883 Jetta; $39,073 Tiguan) — cross-session, cross-method agreement on the same units.

Method, evidence and limits

The comparable. Our site's bottom line adds the $698 dealer fee and subtracts the bonus; cars.com's price convention excludes doc fees. The apples-to-apples figure is therefore (MSRP – Discount) – bonus , with no +$698. Using our site's own bottom line instead would understate the gap by $698 per unit.

- Every price was read off a live page on 27 July 2026. No crawl cache, no search snippets, no estimates.

- No unverified VINs. All 136 cars.com units were matched to a live price stack on our own site. Twelve units missed by the paginated sweep (the results grid re-sorts between requests) were each recovered individually by VIN search.
- Independent transcription check. The cars.com inventory was re-read through a differently-composed URL (model-filtered rather than paginated); all 24 overlapping VIN/price pairs matched the original read exactly.
- Full independent replication. A parallel session repeated the audit end to end using different collection paths, sharing no intermediate data, and reproduced every figure in this report exactly. It additionally confirmed that for all 136 units the extracted price equals the rendered on-screen price, and that the factory program's own trim boundary falls out of the parsed data unprompted — 36 non-SEL Tiguans at exactly $2,500 and 5 SEL R-Line units at $0, matching the published “excludes SEL trims” rule.
- Conservative bonus treatment. Conditional offers shown on our site but not available to every shopper (Military & First Responders, College Graduate) are excluded. Including them would enlarge the reported gap.
- Not verified: Larry H. Miller's ~$1,082 accessories addendum was not present on any reachable live page. It is shown only as a sensitivity, never folded into a primary ranking.
- Scope note: our site lists 161 new VINs against 136 on cars.com. The 25-unit difference is largely units priced off a Market Price line rather than MSRP (typically demo/courtesy vehicles). Whether those should be syndicated is a separate question this audit does not answer.

Recommended fix

The defect is a feed field mapping, not a pricing error. The cars.com export is mapped to the advertised/asking price column instead of the after-incentive lowest price. Two changes:

1. Map the cars.com price field to the bonus-inclusive lowest price — the same figure our site shows as its bottom line, less the $698 dealer fee. Recovers the full $463,428 of visible price.
2. Stop pushing the $698 dealer fee inside the price field. It belongs in the fee/disclosure field; carrying it in price inflates all 136 units.

Sequence by recoverable dollars: Atlas, then Tiguan, then Atlas Cross Sport — with ID.4 worth pulling forward on per-unit impact.

Time sensitivity. The Tiguan Customer Bonus runs 1 July - 31 August 2026. Every day the mapping stays wrong is a day 128 bonus-eligible units are advertised to third-party shoppers above their real price — inside the very window the factory funded the bonus to move them.

How to verify the fix took. After the next feed push, re-read the dealer inventory on cars.com and confirm that non-SEL Tiguans land $2,500 below MSRP-minus-discount rather than $698 above it. The identity proven here is precise enough to tell you immediately whether the remap took effect.

Appendix — full delta table all 136 units

Our lowest = (MSRP – Discount) – bonus, excluding the $698 fee per the convention above. Every unit carries $698 in Dealer Fees. Bonus key: Retail = Retail Customer Bonus · Cust. = Customer Bonus (ID.4). Conditional offers (Military & First Responders, College Graduate) are excluded throughout.
